For people named Nikon, see Nikon disambiguation.

Nikons main competitors in camera and lens manufacturing include Canon, Sony, Fujifilm, Panasonic, Pentax, and Olympus.During World War II the company operated thirty factories with 2,000 employees, manufacturing binoculars, lenses, bomb sights, and periscopes for the Japanese military.Duncan was working in Tokyo when the Korean War began. Duncan had met a young Japanese photographer, Jun Miki, who introduced Duncan to Nikon lenses.This would cause some early problems in Germany as Zeiss complained that Nikon violated its trademarked camera. Exped is the brand Nikon uses for its image processors since 2007.Canon introduced a new type of lenscamera interface with its entirely electronic Canon EOS cameras and Canon EF lens mount in 1987.Launched September 1991 on board the Space Shuttle Discovery, mission STS48. The company also has a Coolpix line which grew as consumer digital photography became increasingly prevalent through the early 2000s. Nikon also never made any phones.The R10 and R8 SUPER ZOOM Super 8 models introduced in 1973 were the top of the line and last attempt for the amateur movie field. The cameras had a special gate and claw system to improve image steadiness and overcome a major drawback of Super 8 cartridge design. The R10 model has a high speed 10X macro zoom lens.The company constructed a factory in Ayuthaya north of Bangkok in Thailand in 1991. By the year 2000, it had 2,000 employees. Steady growth over the next few years and an increase of floor space from the original 19,400 square meters 208,827 square feet to 46,200 square meters 497,300 square feet enabled the factory to produce a wider range of Nikon products. By 2004, it had more than 8,000 workers.In later production cycles, the cameras were double branded with a seriesname on the one and a sales name on the other hand.

Sales names were for example ZoomTouch for cameras with a wide zoom range, LiteTouch for ultra compact models, FunTouch for easy to use cameras and SportTouch for splash water resistance. After the late 1990s, Nikon dropped the series names and continued only with the sales name. Nikons APScameras were all named Nuvis.The Fmount was first introduced on the Nikon F camera in 1959.Recent models include the SBR200, SB300, SB400, SB600, SB700, SB800, SB900, SB910, SB5000 and R1C1. Prior to the development of cool LED lighting this scanner used a halogen lamp hence the name Coolscan for the following models. The resolution of the following LED based Coolscan model didn't increase but the price was significantly lower. Colour depth, scan quality, imaging and hardware functionality as well as scanning speed was gradually improved with each following model. The final top of the line 35mm Coolscan LS5000 ED was a device capable of archiving greater numbers of slides; 50 framed slides or 40 images on film roll. It could scan all these in one batch using special adapters. A single maximum resolution scan was performed in no more than 20 seconds as long as no postprocessing was also performed. With the launch of the Coolscan 9000 ED Nikon introduced its most up-to-date film scanner which, like the Minolta Dimage scanners were the only film scanners that, due to a special version of Digital ICE, were able to scan Kodachrome film reliably both dust and scratch free. In 1925 the microscope having revolving nosepiece and interchangeable objectives was produced. Significant growth for the microscopy division occurs over the next 50 years as Nikon pioneers development of polarising and stereo microscopes along with new products for measuring and inspection Metrology markets. These new products include devices targeted for industrial use such as optical comparators, autocollimators, profile projector and automated vision based systems.

Continued effort through the next three decades yield the release of products including the Optiphot and Labophot microscopes, Diaphot microscope, the Eclipse range of infinity optics, and finally the DS camera series and the Coolscope with the advent of digital sensors. With the acquisition of Metris in 2009 the Nikon Metrology division was born. Retrieved 20100205. Retrieved 20100205. The University of Texas at Austin. Archived from the original on 20071216.
